Chelsea is a senior associate whose practice includes complex commercial litigation, health care, employment, and construction matters. Chelsea's goal is to bring practical judgment, clear communication, and efficient case management to every matter, working to align litigation strategy with the client's business objectives.

In commercial disputes, Chelsea represents business organizations and members in high-stakes cases involving contract breaches, business torts, and fraud, litigating effectively in court, arbitration and other forms of alternative dispute resolution.

A significant portion of Chelsea's work centers on the health care industry. Chelsea represents healthcare organizations, physicians, and providers in a wide range of matters, including healthcare fraud and abuse, compliance and regulatory investigations at the state and federal level, internal investigations, licensing, HIPAA and 42 CFR Part 2 compliance, and related litigation in state, federal, and administrative proceedings.

Chelsea also represents clients in employment matters, including claims of discrimination, harassment, retaliation, and contract-related matters. She also has experience representing clients in construction- and lien-related disputes in state and administrative proceedings.

Chelsea has a distinct interest in public health law and during her time as a Research Scholar with the Center for Public Health Law and Policy at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law, published articles and presented on a variety of public health topics, particularly, the Opioid Epidemic.

In her free time, you can find Chelsea cooking for her friends and family, traveling around the world, and hanging out with her dog.
